Introduction

Tribes are a group of people having distinct language, culture, lifestyle and socio-economic condition and are living in a specific geographical area. Normally, the tribes reside in interior forests, remote and inaccessible areas or in the outskirts of forests and hilly regions. According to Article 180 of the Constitution, the Scheduled Tribes are the tribes or tribal communities or part of groups within these tribes and tribal communities, which have been declared as such by the President through a public notification. As per the 2011 Census, the Schedule Tribes account for 10.42 million representing 8.6 percent of the country's population. The tribes are characterized by distinct cultures, shyness of contact with other communities at large and economical backwardness.

Immediately after independence, Governments both at National and State level have given much importance for the development and welfare of the tribes and this has resulted in improving the living conditions of the tribes across the nation. Illiteracy, unemployment, poverty and its related syndromes have forced the tribes to alienate themselves from the mainstream.

The tribes who are residing in the remote corners of the nation are not having first hand information about what is happening elsewhere in the country. If the student and youth communities are getting sufficient information and opportunities to interact with their peer groups in other parts of the nation, the extremist activities among them can be curtailed. In this context, it has been realised that the tribal youth should be positively engaged and educated and for that; Tribal Youth Exchange Programme under the scheme of Ministry of Home Affairs, GOI is of great help.

Broad Statistics about the issues

India has the largest ever cohort of young people making transition to adulthood. In the National Youth Policy-2003, 'youth' was defined as a person of age between 13-35 years, but in the current National Youth Policy Document 2014, the youth age-group is defined as 15-29 years. It is with a view to have a more focused approach; as far as various policy interventions are concerned. Youth in the age group of 15-29 years comprise 27.5% of the population.

Youth being the most vibrant and resourceful segment of the country's population, they have a vital role to play in fostering and strengthening socio-economic development. They have a right, as well as an obligation, to participate actively in national development and in shaping the destiny of the nation which is, in point of fact, their own destiny. The challenge is to unleash their innate capabilities to come out of poverty, generate development and livelihoods outcomes, which could enable them to live a healthy and meaningful life.

Youth, in all ages, has been in the vanguard of progress and social change. Thirst for freedom, impatience for quicker pace of progress and a passion for innovation, coupled with idealism and creative fervour; saw the youth in the forefront of the freedom struggle in our own land. If our youth was inspired by the call of the Father of the Nation in the 20th Century, the youth of today face the challenge of economic development and technological progress with social inclusion.
